

Goods on Country: the model

Community sleeping on durable, fit-for-purpose beds, building the products, and earning inside community-run enterprises.

The loop

1. Goods on Country facility. Makes the first 400 beds.
2. Four community organisations. 100 beds each. The beds are theirs to sell.
3. The customers. People, businesses and service providers: health services, schools, housing providers, families.
4. The money stays in community. Customers pay the community organisation directly.
5. The community decides. After costs: more beds, paid local work, or making their own.
6. Two community production facilities. QBE's $300,000 builds the first two, $150,000 each, where a community is ready and asks. PROPOSED
7. The next thing they choose to make. Washing machines are already being tested. PROPOSED

The money, in three parts

SOURCE	AMOUNT	BUYS OR CARRIES	ENDS UP
Philanthropy, three grants	$300,000	The first 400 beds. 133 beds a grant, at $750 a bed.	Four community organisations. 100 beds each. Theirs to sell or give out. They invoice the customer and keep every dollar.
QBE Foundation	$300,000	Two community production facilities. $150,000 each, where a community is ready and asks.	Beds made in community. Community-run. Make beds locally for the same customers, and employ local people.
A loan	$150,000	The first year of running Goods on Country. First-year running cost.	Paid back. From the beds Goods on Country sells. Never from a community organisation's sales.
Asked	$750,000	Signed: $0

No money goes back to Goods on Country from a community sale. Customers pay the community organisation $750 a bed, and it stays in community.

What is already real

- 540 beds recorded in 11 communities.
- 320 beds bought and paid for by four organisations, $247,770 net of GST (attachment 07).
- 40 beds pressed at the Goods on Country facility in Queensland and assembled at Gamardi by young people with Homeland School Company.
- 23 washing machines in community.
- Last financial year, the charity's unaudited FY26 statements show income of $77,080 against expenses of $119,934.

What is proposed

- Two community production facilities, where a community has asked and somebody local wants to run it. Neither site has agreed.
- We are working on making the community organisations that take Goods beds or run a production facility members of Goods on Country, the charity. It is a working idea, being worked through with the board. Nothing has changed yet.
